Methodology

October 4 (Bloomberg) -- The Bloomberg Politics North Carolina Poll, conducted Sept. 29-Oct. 2 by Selzer & Co. of Des Moines, Iowa, is based on interviews with 805 North Carolina residents who are say they will definitely vote or have already voted in the 2016 general election.

Interviewers with Quantel Research contacted 1,020 North Carolina adults with randomly selected landline and cell phone telephone numbers supplied by Survey Sampling International. Responses from the full probability sample were weighted by sex, age, race, and educational attainment to reflect the general population based on recent census data. Interviews were administered in English.

Percentages based on the subsample of 805 North Carolina likely voters may have a maximum margin of error of plus or minus 3.5 percentage points. This means that if this survey were repeated using the same questions and the same methodology, 19 times out of 20, the findings would not vary from the percentages shown here by more than plus or minus 3.5 percentage points. Results based on smaller samples of respondents—such as by gender or age—have a larger margin of error.
