

"It appears that Bloomberg news has discovered that bankers make loans to each other. This is not news. Warren Buffett owns NetJets. If NetJets wants to borrow money from Goldman Sachs or Wells Fargo, it's not a conflict because Warren Buffett is a major stakeholder at the bank. Credit is extended in this fashion all the time and the institutions and people who do so, including Steven Mnuchin, follow the law regarding it. The bankruptcy court fully reviewed these issues. All people reading this article can really stop doing so after reading this last sentence." --Tara Bradshaw, Mnuchin Spokeswoman